Entertainments.

HYPERION.

An event of more than ordinary interest, both to the sporting and theatrical world, will be the joint appearance in this city to-morrow evening of Robert Gaylor in a brand new and up-to-date comedy drama called "In a Big City," in conjunction with the city's champion, James J. Corbett, who will spar four energetic rounds with Robert McVea. This is Mr. Corbett's last appearance in public prior to his coming battle with Bob Fitzsimmons for $41,000 and the heavyweight championship of the world, which he now holds. This contest takes place October 31 at Dallas, Tex.

Sale of seats now open.

"The New Boy," the highly popular London and American success, opens a three days' engagement (Thursday) evening. There will be a matinee on Saturday. The play concerns the adventures of a pretty young widow, who has married a little chap no bigger than a boy. When he stands on his toes he can just touch her shoulder. Before she has time to explain the professor of a fashionable boys' school makes her the matron, while her property, fancies her husband is her son, puts him into the classes for discipline and education. The little fellow is a terror. His pranks demoralize the school. In the end he is arrested for stealing apples, but he saves the doctor's fortune and thwarts the villain of the play.

Next week Herr Kilgan's original living pictures will be the attraction at the Grand. This company will go from here to the St. Louis exposition and thence to the Atlanta exposition, where they will show for three weeks. The Elliott family, the famous bicycle riders, unicyclists, will also appear at the same show. Elionia, the famous and unrivaled aerial artist, will be one of the attractions. She is a world renowned and incomparable queen of trapezists and individual performer on the flying rings. This combination has been the chief attraction at Rice's "1892" and in "Little Christopher." They have been engaged by Mr. Bunnell at enormous expense to appear at the Grand opera house.

Puts to go to Atlanta.

Hartford, Aug. 21.—A large number of the Putnam Phalanx left this city have decided to make a trip to the Atlanta exposition this fall by way of Washington, Harper's Ferry and Chattanooga. Major Bickford has called a special meeting at which it is expected the Phalanx will vote to go in a body.

DEATH OF HENRY H. BROMLEY.

Many friends will learn with sorrow of the death of Henry H. Bromley, who passed away yesterday at his home on Hughes place. He was an old, reliable and straightforward man and citizen. His age was seventy-nine. He had been growing feeble for weeks' past, and passed away rather from the giving out of the vital powers than from any special disease. He resided forty-five years ago or more on Green street, just below Hamilton. At that time, the days of Chauncey Jerome, many men of note in the city resided in that section, among them the late Hiram Camp, the late Major Norton and the late Hon. John Woodruff, who were clock shop men. Mr. Bromley afterward bought the Philip Pond place on St. John street near the old St. John street M. E. church, and there he resided perhaps a score of years. Some years ago he sold this place and bought the one on Hughes place, where he died. Mr. Bromley learned the silver plating trade of his brother, who had a silver plated goods store on Chapel street, where the Burgess Fur and Hat company store now is, and who thirty years ago removed to St. Paul, Minn. Mr. Henry H. Bromley became a house painter and executed many contracts for painting for the gas company and for individuals. He was for years a member of the old St. John street M. E. church, and was an Odd Fellow and a member of the Veteran Odd Fellows' association. His wife died years ago, also an adopted daughter. Another adopted daughter, Miss Emma Bromley, who resided with him, survives him.

AMONG THE WHITE MOUNTAINS.

Jefferson, N. H., Aug. 19, 1895.—While many White Mountain tourists to whom Bethlehem, Fabyans, Mount Washington, Crawford Notch and the Profile are familiar localities have little if any knowledge of the beauties of Jefferson, or Jefferson Hill as it is sometimes called, it is, to the writer, not only more attractive as a place for rest and recreation than any of the places just mentioned, but a convenient point from which all the well known White Mountain resorts can in a few hours time be easily reached by carriage or rail.

Jefferson is situated almost in the extreme north of the White Mountain region, ten miles southeast from Lancaster, eighteen miles northwest from the ruins of the old Glen house, near the base of Mount Washington, eighteen miles north from the Crawford house, thirteen miles in the same direction from Fabyans and seventeen miles northeast from Bethlehem. Trains leaving New Haven at 10:50 a. m. and 4 p. m. carry through parlor cars from New York to Jefferson and arrive at the Boston and Maine station in Jefferson at 7:30 p. m. and 9:15 a. m., respectively. The largest hotel in Jefferson and one of the finest in the mountains is the Waumbek, the old Indian name for the White Mountains themselves. This hotel is situated on the southern slope of Starr King Mountain, named by the residents of the village in honor of the author of "The White Hills," the romantic poet preacher who made this lofty eminence his favorite resort. For those to whom fashionable hotel life even during the vacation season has its charm the Waumbek will meet the most exacting demand, but for those to whom a vacation means rather a restful release from the excitement of city life, a welcome opportunity to live for a few months, weeks or days untrammelled by the conventionalities of modern society, the Cold Spring house, located about two miles below the village on the road to Jefferson Highlands, Randolph and Gorham, with its old spring water of exceptional purity, its fresh milk, eggs and vegetables, the products of its own dairy and farm, its mountain wagons, four-in-hands, and saddle horses, its tennis court, croquet ground and golf links, its trout pond stocked for the exclusive use of the Cold Spring house guests, its dry air and superb mountain view, is an ideally healthful and restful spot. Located on the middle ascent of one of the mountains of the beautiful Pfister range it commands magnificent view of Cherry Mountain, still plainly visible from the memorable landslide of July 10, 1885, the Presidential range, including Mount Washington, and the more distant but equally picturesque peaks of the Franconia Mountains. W. H. Crawford, the genial proprietor, who for more than a score of years has here entertained guests, is one of the leading citizens of the village and is familiar with every foot of the mountain territory. He is not unmindful of the spiritual needs of his guests and some have been unforgettably enough to suggest that the free rides to and from church in the mountain wagon which he provided on Sunday for our convenience have enabled some of us to establish a reputation for piety in the mountains for which we had not been supposed to be especially conspicuous at home.

The words "How amiable are Thy tabernacles O Lord of Hosts, Waumbek, September, 1891," which adorn one of the stained glass windows of the pretty little Methodist church here, strike us as at least displaying enterprise from a business standpoint and the words "Union House, Eight Brothers, September, 1891," on another mountain window while less scriptural are equally suggestive. Perhaps some can surmise why these windows remind us of the following news item which we clipped from the local column of a New Haven paper some time ago: "The reason why President Harrison was not afraid to deliver his inaugural address in the rain was because he knew that if he caught cold Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam would cure him."

Cold Spring house accommodates but thirty guests. Of these thirty ten are from New Haven. During our brief sojourn in the mountains now drawing to a close we have ascended Mount Prospect and Willard by carriage, Mount Washington by rail and Starr King on foot. We have dined at the Mount Pleasant house and supped at the well known Crawford house. We have taken delightful excursions to Jefferson Highlands, Fabyans, Crawford Notch, the Profile and Bethlehem have been awed by the grandeur of the White Hills of New Hampshire, invigorated by their health restoring atmosphere and are, we trust, better fitted to once more resume their prosaic duties which await us fifteen hundred feet nearer the level of the sea.
